I. INTRODUCTION

This matter came before the Court on February 8, 2018 in Courtroom 220A on Petitioner Ignacia T. Saures' Motion to Reopen Case. Attorney Rosemond B. Santos appeared for and with Petitioner Saures. Attorney Charity Hodson appeared for and with Jose R. Lifoifoi, heir of Adela Lifoifoi. Juan Rebuenog and Jose Rebuenog, heirs of Pedro Rebuenog also appeared to voice their objection to Petitioner's Motion to Reopen Case.

Based on a review of the filings, oral arguments, and applicable law, the Court makes thefollowing order.

II. BACKGROUND

On August 18, 1978, a Judgment of Distribution was entered in this matter, finding Ignacia T. Pua (now Ignacia T. Saures) is an heir of Vicente Rebuenog and entitled to a one-fifth share of ^{24 &}lt;sup>1</sup> The prior filings in this case are captioned as "In the Matter of Pedro S. Rebuenog for the Heirs of Vicente Rebuenog, Father." The Probate Court is now captioning this case as "The Estate of Vicente Rebuenog" as an effort to comply with the 2017 revisions to the Northern Mariana Islands Supreme Court Style Manual.

1 the Estate of Vicente Rebuenog. The August 18, 1978 Judgment of Distribution further found that 2 Adela Lifoifoi, Pedro Rebuenog², Teodoro Selepeo, and Antonia Kani are natural children of 3 Vicente Rebuenog, each entitled to a one-fifth share in the estate of Vicente Rebuenog. The 4 August 18, 1978 Judgment of Distribution, among other distributions, distributed Lot No. 1769, 5 Garapan, Saipan, containing an area of 1/3 hectares, more or less, in equal and undivided shares to 6 Ignacia T. Saures, Adela Lifoifoi, Pedro Rebuenog, Teodoro Selepeo, and Antonia Kani. Although 7 each of the heirs received an equal 1/5 share of the estate, Petitioner represents to the court that "no 8 efforts were made to divide and equally partition Lot No. 1769...among the five (5) heirs." Mot. to 9 Reopen at 2. The distribution and partition of the estate amongst the heirs following the closing of 10 the probate case is a "decades-long disagreement." Mot. to Reopen at 4.

On October 19, 2017, Petitioner Saures moved this Court to reopen this matter for the purpose of amending the Judgment of Distribution to direct an equal partitioning of Lot No. 1769 among the five heirs. Jose R. Lifoifoi, heir of Adela Lifoifoi filed his Opposition to Motion to Reopen Case on January 31, 2018. The Court heard arguments on the Motion to Reopen Case on February 8, 2018. In addition to hearing arguments from Petitioner and Jose R. Lifoifoi, the Court also heard objections to the Motion to Reopen Case from Juan Rebuenog and Jose Rebuenog. The parties filed their proposed orders on March 9, 2018.

The proposed order from Jose R. Lifoifoi included as an attachment a Declaration of Heirs in Support of Opposition to Reopen, signed by Fermin S. Lifoifoi, Rosalia L. Marquez, Anthony
R. Camacho, Juan F. Rebuenog, Fabiana Kani, Enrique Rebuenog, Vicente F. Rebuenog, Celina
Kani, Rosana Spizzirri, Jose P. Kani, and Carmen Rebuenog joining Jose R. Lifoifoi's opposition.

1	III. DISCUSSION
2	Petitioner's Motion to Reopen Probate seeks to partition Lot No. 1769, allegedly because
3	the heirs have not come to an agreement on how the property should be partitioned. A judgment
4	was entered in this case on August 18, 1978, nearly forty years ago, distributing the estate and
5	closing the probate proceeding. In re Estate of Rebuenog, Civ. No. 76-0128 (Aug. 18, 1978)
6	(Judgment of Distribution).
7	The Commonwealth Rules of Probate Procedures and the relevant Commonwealth Code
8	sections do not explicitly allow for closed probates to be reopened. However, the Probate Court
9	has broad discretion in probate proceedings to entertain any relevant matters that may come before
10	it in a probate matter, as follows:
11	(a) To the full extent permitted by the Northern Mariana Islands Constitution and the Schedule on Transitional Matters, the Commonwealth Trial Court shall have
12	jurisdiction over all subject matter relating to estates of decedents, including construction of wills and determination of heirs and successors of decedents.
13 14	 (b) The Commonwealth Trial Court shall have full power to make orders, judgments, and decrees and take all other action necessary and proper to administer justice in the matters which come before it.
15	8 CMC § 2202. The Commonwealth Rules of Probate Procedures are to be "used in conjunction
16	with the [Commonwealth] Code and are designed to provide a procedure for the efficient probate
17	of an estate with notice to all interested persons so that upon closing of the estate a fair and proper
18	distribution according to law is affected." NMI R. Pro. 1. Despite this flexibility, "probate
19	judgments are actually afforded a greater degree of finality than regular judgments." In re Estate of
20	Hillblom, 2011 MP 5 ¶ 14 (citing Stevens v. Torregano, 192 Cal. App. 2d 105, 114 (Cal. Ct. App.
21	1997)) (addressing late claims on a probated estate).
22	Petitioner relies on In re Estate of Chang Soo Lee for the proposition that the Probate Court
23	has the power to reopen probate cases, despite the lack of written provisions in the Commonwealth
24	Rules of Probate Procedure and the Commonwealth Code allowing for the reopening of probates. - 3 -

Mot. to Reopen at 3-4. In In re Estate of Chang Soo Lee, the former administratrix moved to reopen the probate eight years after final distribution "to include and distribute *recently discovered*leasehold interests in two real estate properties." Civ. No. 05-0498-CV (Aug. 20,2015) (Order Granting Motion to Reopen Case at 1) (hereinafter "Chang Soo Lee Order") (emphasis added). The reopening motion in Chang Soo Lee was unopposed.

6 In Chang Soo Lee, the Probate Court found that the power to reopen probates comes from 7 the Court's "general powers," holding that "a court may depart from a previous ruling if it was (1) 8 clearly erroneous and (2) would work a manifest injustice." Chang Soo Lee Order at 2 (quoting In 9 re Estate of Roberto, 2010 MP 7 ¶ 18). The Probate Court looked to the Uniform Probate Code, 10 which the Commonwealth Rules of Probate Procedure are modeled on, noting that under the Uniform Probate Code, "a petitioner may reopen the probate at any time after discharge of the 11 12 administrator or one year after filing of a closing statement." Id. (citing In re Estate of Reyes, 2012 13 MP 13 ¶ 17; UPC § 3-1008).

The Court finds the facts in Chang Soo Lee to be easily distinguishable from those in the present case. In Chang Soo Lee, the former administratrix was unopposed when she moved to reopen the estate eight years after its closure because of recently discovered assets that had been omitted from the final distribution. Chang Soo Lee Order at 1. Here, the Petitioner seeks to reopen a probate that has been closed for nearly forty years based upon a dispute over distribution that is, according to her, a "decades-long disagreement," and her motion is opposed by descendants of the other original heirs. Mot. to Reopen at 4 (emphasis added); Opp. at 1-2.

The Petitioner asks the Court to reopen the probate to revisit the original ruling of undivided shares and "recognize [Petitioner's] partitioned share of [the] estate, [and] to delineate the heirs' respective 1/5 share of said estate." Mot. to Reopen at 3. Although the Probate Court has all the necessary and proper power and authority to reopen closed probates in justifiable circumstances, this is not one of those justifiable circumstances. At the time of final distribution there were no objections to the distribution of the property into undivided interests among the heirs. Although the Probate Court may reopen probates for numerous justifiable reasons and circumstances such as, in Chang Soo Lee, correcting inadvertent and unintentional omissions of property from the estate.

6 The Probate Court balances the justifiable circumstances that will or should reopen³ a 7 probate matter—such as but not limited to, property that was unintentionally omitted from the 8 estate or to allow quiet title actions where property of the estate was misidentified and mistakenly 9 distributed. In the present case, there is no evidence that any assets were inadvertently or 10 unintentionally omitted from the estate, nor were there any mistakes made in the probating of the 11 estate.

"[P]robate judgments are actually afforded a greater degree of finality than regular judgments." In re Estate of Hillblom, 2011 MP 5 ¶ 14 (citing Stevens v. Torregano, 192 Cal. App.
2d 105, 114 (Cal. Ct. App. 1997)). Thus, Probate Court decisions should have a sense of finality, so family members and their descendants shall have confidence of the ownership of the land.

¹⁷ ³ The following CNMI cases mention the reopening of probate in dicta but do not substantively address the issue: In the Matter of the Estate of Camacho, 2012 MP 8 ¶ 3-4 (Stating in its recitation of procedural history that the petitioner 18 moved to reopen an estate in order to bring a quiet title lawsuit on behalf of the estate because the Order for Final Distribution had misidentified some of the decedent's real property); Guerrero v. Quitugua, 6 NMI 67, 70 (Where appellant appealed a Decree of Final Distribution but her claim was based on ownership of property and not as an heir 19 to the estate, the Supreme Court noted that the proper procedure to claim ownership of the land was to reopen the three estates regarding the disputed title under the theory that the judgments were erroneous, which would allow a procedure 20 to have them set aside or reversed under Restatement (Second) of Judgments § 17 cmt. D (1980)); In re Estate of Camacho, 4 NMI 22, 24 (1993) (Stating in its recitation of procedural history that a party filed a motion to reopen an 21 estate three years after it was closed in order to include property in the estate which that party believed belonged to the estate and required distribution); In re Estate of Hillblom, 2011 MP 5 ¶ 23 (Affirming the Superior Court's decision to deny a motion to reopen a probate case on the basis that res judicata and 8 CMC § 2702 barred claims of heirship after 22 the estate had been closed); In re the Estate of Maria Cepeda Rios, 2008 MP 5 ¶ 5 (Stating in its recitation of procedural history that the parties had stipulated to reopen the case based on a civil suit to quiet title against the estate); Camacho 23 v. Camacho, Civ. No. 05-0545 (NMI Super. Ct. June 19, 2006) (Amended Order Partially Denying D.'s Mot. to Dismiss at 6) (Stating in dicta that if it is later discovered that some portion of an estate is not probated, the heirs may ²⁴ move to reopen the estate within a reasonable time after the discovery of the omitted portion).

1 Further, and equally important, there are other more suitable and appropriate legal 2 mechanisms available to the Petitioner to force partition of an undivided property among 3 landowners that do not require reopening a probate that was closed forty-years ago. Reopening a 4 closed probate in essence requires the Court to reach back in time and disturb a decision that has 5 hardened over the years, a court decision that families, businesses and commercial entities have 6 relied upon. Reopening a closed probate is no small matter. The further back in time the probate 7 was closed and finalized, the higher the probability of disruption to the families, business and 8 commercial entities' expectations and reliance on the Court's decision.

So that it is absolutely clear, the Probate Court has all the necessary and proper power and authority to reopen a probate when justice requires. However, the Probate Court weighs Petitioner's request to reopen a probate against the fact that Petitioner has other less drastic legal mechanisms available. Since Petitioner has other more suitable and appropriate legal mechanisms available to force partition of an undivided property among landowners that does not require reopening a probate that was closed forty-years ago, the Court then declines to reopen the probate and denies Petitioner's Motion to Reopen.

IV. CONCLUSION

16

Therefore, for the reasons stated above, the Court DENIES Petitioner's Motion to Reopen.
 IT IS SO ORDERED this 8th day of August 2018.
